HEARING LOSS/SPEECH IMPAIRMENTS

If you have trouble hearing certain sounds or distinguishing words, your first step is to see your doctor. He or she can examine your ears to see if a treatable condition is affecting your hearing. Your doctor can remove ear wax, prescribe medications for infections, or refer you to an ear-nose-and-throat doctor (Otolaryngologist).

Your second step is to see a clinical audiologist, a non-medical rehabilitation professional. An audiologist can conduct tests necessary to diagnose and prescribe hearing aids, and can fit clients with the most appropriate hearing aid model.

Hearing aid dealers have limited training in problems of the ear, and should not be relied on for testing and diagnosis for hearing problems.
